MASS. MAN TRAVELED VARIETY OF WAYS

Frank Kinnure of Everett, Mass., reached West Bethel this year on his twenty-fourth annual visit in a novel manner. Leaving Everett he took the elevated into Boston, went through the tunnel and then by airplane to Portland, by yacht to Falmouth, by bus to Lewiston, by electric cars to Mechanic Falls, and by train to West Bethel.

The following taken from the Everett Evening News will be of interest to many who were associated with him in the Whitten & Dennison Post Card Co. at West Bethel 25 years ago.

"Frank Kinnure of 18 Henry street, assistant caretaker at the Whidden Memorial hospital and a locksmith of parts in his spare moments, left Saturday for Portland, Me., by plane, where he will set out on a hitch-hiking trip to the White Mountains.

"Frank usually starts his perambulations somewhere along the Newburyport Turnpike but decided to forego the usual routine, this summer, and took to the air. Not having devised any means by which he might attract the attention of some magnanimous pilot and hitch-hike atmospherically the Henry street gentleman made his start from Boston.

"He expects to reach the heart of the White Mountain district by the end of the week, spend a few days in that healthy environment and return home at the end of two weeks. Whether he returns by plane or not remains to be seen."

WEDDING BEAUTIFUL

Who Is The Bride? Who Is The Groom? South Paris and Norway Selected for the Ceremony.

A wedding beautiful is to be consumated in South Paris and Norway on Thursday, the 13th of September, according to reliable information which has reached this office. We understand that it is not to be a wedding restricted to relatives and friends but a ceremony arranged so that the South Paris and Norway world and his wife, so to speak, may attend. The town is promised a truly artistic spectacle to the strains of "O Promise Me." Expense and energy will be a secondary consideration in sending the bride to the altar in the most exquisite trousseau that it is possible to imagine. Hired dress designers will not only turn out the first lady of the ceremony in all the allurements that the occasion demands but the bridesmaids and the infant train bearers will grace the wedding in raiment of design and color scheme calculated to produce nothing short of an artistic triumph.

Since time immemorial the wedding ceremony has provoked a fascinating interest in every land and clime. It is not always held to the strains of Mendelsohn's "Wedding March," the chime of bells with the bride wreathed in smiles, orange blossoms, and bridal veil. But a wedding is a wedding and holds the spot light whether it be the free for all fight that climaxes Eskimo ceremonies or the exchange of a few pigs which marks the transfer of a daughter to a husband in the wilds of New Guinea. Some husbands have to be contented with taking pot luck as in Arabia, where the bride is never seen by her future husband before the ceremony. He certainly buys a pig in the bag.

The old fashioned Russian wedding was a most colorful and beautiful affair, but today the Soviet has eliminated all ceremony, and the mere passing around of money and the signing of a document binds a couple in legal matrimony.

On thru India, Japan, amongst the Malays and the savage tribes of Africa the wedding ceremony stands paramount of all ceremonies in which Japanese citizens, the

GOOD WILL HOMES INTEREST BETHEL PEOPLE

There was a good attendance of guests and Bethel people at the program given by the Good Will Homes and Schools at Bethel Inn Sunday evening. As announced in the Citizen last week talks were given by Miss M. Elizabeth Arnts, field secretary, and W. P. Hinckley, superintendent. The speakers were introduced by Rev. P. J. Clifford. A violin solo was rendered by Leroy Mason of the School, accompanied by Richard Russell of Bethel.

Much interest was shown in the work of the school, especially as some of the listeners were acquainted with two of the school's boys who have become successful in their chosen work. David R. Porter, a Good Will student who later married the eldest daughter of G. W. Hinckley, president of the Good Will Association, was the first Rhodes scholar from Maine, since graduating from Oxford has been secretary of the International Y. M. C. A., and now has charge of the department of religious education at the Northfield and Mount Hermon Schools. Another Good Will boy, Dr. Arthur L. Dean, is one of the discoverers of the cure for leprosy, and president of the University of Hawaii.

BETHEL GRAIN STORES JOINED

A deal of interest to many people of Bethel and vicinity was consummated last week when Roy C. Moore, who has been a grain dealer for several years in the Jordan building, sold his busines to the J. B. Ham Co. Mr. Moore will now be found at the Ham store where a complete line of Amco and Wayne feeds will be carried in addition to the usual stock carried by the Ham stores.

The Ham company has been in business here 20 years, buying the Bisbee grain mill on Main Street and continuing there until eight years ago when they moved to the Purington store near the station. The present manager, A. S. Grover, has been with the concern several years, and for the past two years has been in charge of the Bethel store.

TRUMAN THROWS HINES

Homer Truman, Norway veteran, took two quick falls at last night's boxing and wrestling at the Grange Hall from Red Hines. The first in 3:30 with a body scissors, the next in 4:00 with a head scissors. Hines was exhausted, having just lost the main bout of the boxing to Eddy Robinson, South Boston colored boy, on a technical knockout in three rounds. Hines went on as a substitute for Joe Carson, who didn't show up, and the black boy's body attack was too much for him.

In the semi-final Gene Mitchell of Lewiston edged Blondy Gayton of Auburn. Gayton couldn't keep out of the way of Mitchell's left. Tiger Cloutier of Lewiston outpointed Bill Davis, also of Lewiston, in four fast stanzas.

After the main bout, Mike Naimey, local merchant, challenged Truman to wrestle next Wednesday and was accepted.

HAPPY-GO-LUCKY 4-H CLUB TO HOLD CONTEST

On Tuesday, Sept. 4th, the Happy-Go-Lucky 4-H Club will hold their local contest in the lecture room of the Methodist Church at 3 o'clock. Miss Doris Rosen, County Club Agent, will be present. There will be a short program and the girls will display some of the season's work. This meeting marks the end of the club year and everyone is invited. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance, as this is your chance to show your interest in the 4-H Club work in Bethel.

CHAPMAN DIRECTS AT EASTERN MUSIC CAMP

Offers Prize at Concert in His Honor—375 Members of Old Festival Chorus Present

(Lewiston Evening Journal)

Two weeks ago Dr. William R. Chapman was very ill. There seemed to be no possibility of his attending the Eastern Music Camp concert to be given in his honor Aug. 25. Mrs. Chapman said he could not go. The Doctor said he could not go. Dr. Chapman said: "I'm going to get better; I'm going to that concert; I'm going to conduct if it's the last thing I do."

Dr. Chapman was there and he conducted.

He has every reason to be pleased and gratified with the Chapman Day program, Sunday, for those who have been attending the Sunday concerts throughout the season pronounced this one the best of all—a splendid climax to the season. The audience was the largest of the summer with the exception of Damrosch Day, and most enthusiastic. Fine tributes were paid to Dr. Chapman for the great musical work he has accomplished in Maine and for his promotion of all projects for raising the musical standard of the State and particularly the Eastern Music Camp.

About 375 of the members of Director Chapman's old Music Festival chorus, from York to Washington counties, were present to sing once more under his baton. There were good-sized delegations from the Lewiston and Auburn and the Portland choruses, and groups

REMINISCENSES OF EAST STONEHAM

By J. N. COLE

A brutal murder was committed in West Stoneham, and Cal McKeen was the victim. The murderer was a Mr. John Coffin assisted by Mrs. McKeen (a daughter of Orris Parker of East Stoneham) who held the light. Mr. McKeen was struck nineteen times, any one blow being enough to kill him. Mr. Cogin was given 5 years in States Prison. The weapon used was a flatiron.

Charles F. Cole, while cutting timber in the edge of Lovell, cut his foot quite badly, the blade going clear through. Then afterwards in August, 1875, while operating a large double planer at the Barker mills, he got his left hand caught in the knives and severed it near the elbow.

Elliott C. Newman, while hunting shot himself fatally. This was on Toad hill. Mr. Newman was a spool turner at Lynchville. Joel Sawyer, while working in his up and down saw mill had a log roll on him and it broke his leg. His brother-in-law, Melzie Brown, picked him up bodily and carried him into the house. L. N. Cole, while running a bolter at Brown's mill sawing out spool stock, accidently severed one finger clear to the palm. Joseph Parker, (Joe) a son of Orris Parker, was killed in Pennsylvania while teaming, by being run over by a heavy timber wagon. The body was brought to this town and buried under the I. O. O. F. ritual. The funeral was considered one of the most unusual ever held in town at that time. The farm buildings on the old Lane farm, so called, were occupied by Daniel Wentworth and family, and they were totally destroyed by fire. And the large block of buildings in the village owned by Sumner Evans, P. M., was totally destroyed by fire February 2nd, 1872. The last items occurred in the 70's.

After Mr. Russell's wife, Mary, died, he in time married an elderly lady named Skillings and occupied the Thomas D. Foster house after Mr. Foster moved, it is supposed, to Portland.

Several different preachers came to town occasionally and held services with fair success. And about this time the Ladies' Aid bought a very nice Holy Bible and the Daniel Merrill family had charge of it. This Mr. Merrill lived on the place formerly owned by Mr. Howe after he sold his mill property he sold to Mr. Merrill, and then moved onto or near the first farm settled in Waterford, on McQuain Hill.

The first stage driver to come to town was Charles Scribner, it is understood, and he drove for several years, and became quite popular. And he was succeeded by John Rice of North Waterford, and for years carried the U. S. Mail from South Paris to North Lovell.

When the road was first laid out through East Stoneham from Toad Hill to run it over the sand hill to the right hand, it came out near Cold Brook, and in time a part of the hill was dug away and the road passed around it, and the old road became a part of the village cemetary which came down to the new part. Now on the other side of the new road A. E. Cole and his chum, while poking around in the sand with a stick by the side of the new road, found a peculiar looking stone which proved to be an Indian tomahawk, which had been lost this was about 1874 on Pequawket Indian trail, which had passed along many years before. And then on to Papoose Pond and on to Bethel, Maine. In some places this trail through Stoneham was from a level to 18 or more inches deep.

There is a tradition that another man also carried on the Moore Mill and that Jock Moore, Esq., occupied and perhaps built the village tavern later carried on by Orris Parker. Also that Mr. Mark Ham owned the mill known as Ham's Mill, later managed by Bent Bartlett (financed by Jock Bartlett, his brother) and that a small building in the corner of the yard near the sawyer Mill was built and used for a post-office by Joel Sawyer, the first Postmaster of the town.

Pyroil Wins Again!

On August 2, 1934, a model A-1930 Ford, driven by Alex B. Robinton of Lawrence, Mass., climbed Mt. Washington, N. H., and made the return trip WITHOUT OIL IN THE CRANKCASE.

Upon completion of the trip, the motor was examined and found to be in first class condition. Witnesses stated, "It was a real thrill to note the smoothness with which the motor performed, without any effort and with no sign of overheating."

This climb is considered a real test for any motor with oil and proved once more the safety feature involved in PYROIL lubrication.

I do not want to live under a philanthropy. I do not want to be taken care of by the government either directly or by any instruments through which the government is acting. I want only to have is acting. I want only to have right and justice prevail so far as I am concerned.—Woodrow Wilson.

When legislative powers are surrendered to executives who are but too willing to accept them; when the judiciary strive to find reasons for upholding laws enacted at the behest of noisy minorities; when the plain and simple language of Federal and State Constitutions is given new and strange meaning in order to meet assumed existing emergencies; when debasement of the currency is adopted as a sound financial policy, when the sovereignty of the individual States is disregarded and local self-government becomes an obsolete phrase; when individual initiative is discouraged, the lessons of experience cast aside and personal liberty in a great measure becomes a thing of the past; when men are denied the right to buy or sell the products of their labor in the open market place, fixing the prices of the goods in which they deal by bargain with their fellows; when the farmer is forbidden to sow and reap on the land he owns according to his own best judgment; when every detail of the daily business life of the citizen is ordered by officials, not of his own choosing; when written agreements cease to have a binding force, even upon government itself—the nation which the Civil War was fought to preserve will have ceased to be.—Chief Justice William R. Pattangall.

The Modern Pied Piper

THE REAL QUESTION

When you vote on repeal at the coming election the real question is—Do you desire the return of the saloon. Already with beer parlors and the laxity following the last Presidential campaign there has been more than twice as many drunks as before 1933. Already auto accidents have nearly doubled and the deaths from auto accidents are over 30% more than in 1932.

Already the saloon or something worse has come into Boston—New York—Chicago—most all the cities and many of the towns through the nation and even the very wet papers are voicing protest and warning.

I quote from several Chicago papers. I could quote from the press of almost any city. In the worst places during the worst days of the old saloon in Chicago conditions were not as bad as the following excerpts from the day by day newspapers report.

Chicago Herald and Examiner, May 6, 1934: "Shocking evidence of how Chicago's high school girls and boys—children between 13 and 18 years of age—are being lured into depravity by saloon keepers who flagrantly violate the law by plying child patrons with liquor has been discovered during a fortnight's survey of the city's unregulated saloon orgies which outrivaled the debaches of Paris' notorious Quarter Latin. . . . Drunkenness and laxity of morals are common in the dimly lit back rooms of these saloons, many of which carry on their vicious trade in the very shadows of the city's schools. . . . . Sprawled on the floor and asleep at the long tables were a dozen young boys and nearly as many girls. Some were obviously 14 and 15 years old. The older ones were 17 and 18. These children were students of Lake View High School. . . . . A score or more of couples were locked in tight embrace. Others staggered about the dance floor. A beer stein crashed against the wall. Fights broke out. . . . . The beer was still flowing."

This is how "temperance" is being promoted in Chicago under repeal. The saloon keepers, brewers, and distillers are making the profits, but the children "pay the freight."

Chicago Herald and Examiner, Mar. 8, 1934: A statement by Rev. Alice Phillips Aldrich, welfare superintendent of the Illinois Vigilance Association. "Chicago's present-day saloons are causing delinquency among young girls to an extent never equaled even in the old days of segregated vice. I began my work here with girls back in 1910, when the vice districts were in full blast. . . But there was nothing to compare with what today Chicago is tolerating, when young people of opposite sexes, often strangers to each other, drink openly until they no longer are responsible for their actions."

Chicago American, Mar. 6, 1934: "Ten saloons in one block—the Barbary Coast in the '90's. Ten 'taverns' in one block—Chicago, 1934. And this is not down around Twenty-second Street, not down around the near North Side, noted for its 'hot spots' and night-life rendevous, but in one of the supposedly nicer residential sections of the city—Rogers Park!"

Chicago American, Mar. 7, 1934: "Throughout the West Side we find open 'taverns' where formerly there were known speakeasies. . . . The only difference is that now they are running wide open, where formerly there was necessity of camouflage. Throughout the place men and women are mingling freely. We find no introductions necessary, nor any need to take the initiative." The saloon has, indeed, been brought 'into the open' and it is found to be as competent as ever in evading and ignoring the laws made to control it and to be even more disreputable than the 'speakeasy' it was to displace but has succeeded only in supplementing."

Chicago American, Mar. 9, 1934: "Control over our younger people has been weakening ever since the advent of the 'jazz age,' and now, finally this laxity has found its outlet in the new, unsupervised 'tavern.' Whereas the youngest customer the old-time saloon ever encountered was the youth at least in his early twenties, we find irresponsible 'taverns' of today patronized by young people, boys and girls alike, in their teens. . . . . Today's 'taverns' rapidly are becoming worse than the old-time saloon. The saloon, at least, with all its abuses, did not encourage the presence of women and young people."

Certainly the good men and women of America will not stand idly by while the modern saloon, which they were promised should not come back, destroys the bodys and souls of thousands of boys and girls in every city which has liquor control—control by liquor. Will the people in the States still dry rely on political promises that will not be kept, or will they rely on the ballot cast for prohibition, the only protection against the saloon?

These conditions challenge you, Mr. and Mrs. Voter. Repeal means the tavern—or what have you—drunken women and children—sorrow—disaster—perhaps your best loved ones to suffer.

Vote No on Repeal.

A FAIR QUESTION

Stirred by growing tendency of his fellow townsmen to use the newspaper for everything but advertising, a South Dakota editor recently asked them pertinently, in a page one box:

"If a member of your family died, would you send out the obituary in a circular letter? If your wife entertained, would you run a slide on the screen of the movie show? If you were to enlarge your store would you tell folks in a hotel register? If you were to have a wedding at your house would you tack the news on a telephone post?

"Then why in heck don't you put your advertising in the newspaper too?"

Merrill of the Music Camp board of direc- old a special tribute to Dr. an "a man whom we all love ho has done more than any other person to create in Maine a love for the best music." He compared Dr. Chapman to an old war horse who has only to hear a gun to spur him to fresh victories. Another old war horse, said he, was the Apostle Paul. "Dr. Chapman could say with Paul, 'I have fought the good fight,, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith,' only, happily, Dr. Chapman's course is not finished. Pluck and will-power had revived him and brought him to this concert."

Dr. Chapman was presented a big bouquet from the Camp, for which Mrs. Chapman thanked them, and for all their other courtesies, in her usual felicitous manner. He was not too fatigued to greet many old friends and notable guests after the concert.

The two artists secured for the program by Dr. Chapman were Erle B. Renwick, baritone, and Miss Agnes Skillin, soprano, both products of Maine of whom, said Dr. Chapman, the State should be proud. Mr. Renwick employed action as well as vocal vehemence to bring out the dramatic thrill of the "Toreador Song," and to create the spirit of the arena which he does in a manner few singers equal.

In sharp contrast was his "Hear Me, Winds and Waves" from an old opera by Handel, sung with the same virility but with a quieter power and resonant depths of tone.

Miss Skillin sang "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark" and "Care Salve," by Handel. Her clear, bird-like tones, and trills and her fine, true high notes brought warm applause. The concert was happy in its accompanists, who were Wilfred Tremblay, Miss Florence Smith of Springvale and Mrs. George Bowen.

tribesmen, the human being from king to pauper is freely allowed to engage in. Weddings in some parts of the world are of such great importance that they last for days and days and the festivities never cease day or night. Musicians fall asleep over their instruments and still they play mechanically. Such happenings are quite common at Javanese weddings in the Dutch Indies.

Perhaps these little brown skinned people know how to conduct and enjoy such affairs more so than do we, because many of those who attend are more often strangers. There is something of the public wedding in the Java affair, a sort of invitation to the world to join in with the lovers and their happiness.

Thousands of people tried to get a glimpse of the Astor wedding with its traditional swank of New York's four hundred, but millions followed the course of the ceremony in the daily press. That wedding was featured in headlines in the newspapers throughout the world. Fast moving throngs in the great cities will halt in their rush to rubber-neck a glimpse of the happy bride and her somewhat self-conscious groom as they flash by in an auto. The women gurgle, "Isn't she lovely," the men allude to another poor fellow gone wrong, but the great human interest is there because all the world loves a lover.

Who is the lover and lass in South Paris and Norway? Who is the best man? Who are to be the bridesmaids and train bearers in this the first ceremony to be given in South Paris and Norway for all the world and his wife?

This newspaper got wind of this wedding beautiful scheduled for September 13, so we assigned our most tenacious sleuth to this job of running the affair to earth. A deal of chinwaggings and whisperings in certain quarters led us to investigate a highly respected citizen of this town who confessed to knowing something of the wedding beautiful. In fact he went so far as to substantiate the whispers that South Paris and Norway was to be regaled with a wedding for which open invitations would be the order of the day. Outside of that the genial citizen would not commit himself but he did suggest that we might communicate with a well known citizen of New York, Phil Wirth, who might give him what might be termed inside information on the wedding beautiful.

Delving further into the lead supplied by the citizen we communicated with Mr. Phil Wirth at the Palace Theatre Building, New York, and he informed us that a wedding beautiful was to be held in South Paris and Norway. He was strictly mum as to who were the principals, but he did know of a courteous and distinguished looking gentleman who had been requested to proceed to South Paris and Norway to direct and arrange for a wedding ceremony, Sept. 13. However, with all due respect to a worthy citizen of South Paris and Norway, we have a suspicion that he is putting over a Howard Thurston, in other words he has something up his sleeve.

They also discussed the exhibition to be at the Fair, and at local Contest.

A baked bean supper will be held at the Grange Hall next Saturday, Sept. 1. The President appointed a committee for the supper. After the meeting a program was enjoyed.

GROVER HILL

Harry A. Lyon and two sons of Bethel were at the farm Sunday.

A. J. Peaslee has been cutting bushes in his pasture.

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

Sunday, August 26—What lovely weather we are having! This is another perfect day.

I have so many nice things to write about I hardly know just how to begin. Well. We are glad to see "Pete" Andrews about town. He has just returned from his vacation spent with friends at Rockland, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Davis' accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Omer Brown of Bryant Pond were up to Bethel Hill, Aug. 26th.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Andrews and Miss Minnie Stevens spent Friday, Aug. 24, with Dr. Hatt and family at his summer camp in Naples.

Laurie Innonen has signed up with government officials for the pasturage of range cattle, some two hundred head, and has a large crew of men getting the range in readiness. A part of the cattle will graze on the Curtis Hills range, the others on Molly Ockett Mountain.

Walter Ordway of Bryant Pond has been housing the kindling wood at Union School house and making some minor repairs.

Mrs. Elsie Dean, after spending ten days with her aunt, Ruth Cole, on an outing at Old Orchard Beach has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Gayden Davis and family spent Sunday at Mechanic Falls. On the way home Mr. Davis could not resist the temptation to visit the aviation field and engaged passage for himself and daughter, Edith Manola. This being Mr. Davis' third trip he requested to go higher up which they did, losing sight of terre firma, far above the clouds. As on previous trips taken last week, Mr. Davis was great in praise for the thrills of flying enjoyment.

Mrs. Lyla Dean gave a surprise birthday dinner party for her husband, Ralph Dean, Thursday, August 23. It was a complete surprise when, arriving home from his work, where he is employed by I. W. Andrews & Son, to be joyously greeted and congratulated by fourteen relatives and friends forming a merry group around a dinner table so tastefully arranged by his wife and daughter, Elsie.

Last week I told you about the sad accident which happened to Aunt Ella Sweetser when, in falling, she broke her wrist and shoulder and badly injured her lower limbs. Exray was used, finding the case most serious. After suffering untold misery Mrs. Sweetser is resting comfortably at this writing and much hope is entertained that through faith and loving care she may be healed.

The Andrews reunion is being celebrated today, Aug. 26, at the homestead estate of the late I. W. Andrews, now owned and occupied by A. M. Andrews and his descendants. This place of business and home life has been in progressive activity one hundred and ten years, beginning with its foundation by Zibe Andrews, one of the town's earliest settlers. Today the lovely grounds are resplendent in gala attire. The 44 Class Band is discoursing sweet music in commemoration of the event. Mr. Andrew's children and grandchildren are extending welcomes to all. The gathering shows many out-of-town people who have come from afar to congratulate and extend good will wishes to their host. A bountiful dinner was served. Special music was rendered by a South Paris quartette. Many pleasant memories of the day will be exchanged, all hoping to meet again another year.

Another large gathering at Perkins Valley, South Woodstock, is taking place this day. The relatives, descendants of Mellen and Nancy Thurlow Benson and those of Franklin and Phiba Thurlow are today holding a family reunion, the Benson-Thurlow reunion, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bernald Thurlow where many plans have been made for their entertainment. Special music and speaking by the children and older children with sports and two previously arranged ball games for entertainment are announced. There has been a long line of autos going up to Perkins Valley and a late rport gives over one hundred and fifty direct descendants in attendance, while friends numbering as many more are present. A bountiful dinner has been prepared and the day being perfect, this occasion will make a red letter on the calender of the pleasant events at South Woodstock.

The Braves of Molly Ockett—As I write a friendly exhibition game of baseball battle is being staged for the entertainment of guests between the Benson and Thurlow clans from both sides of which the sturdy Braves have received their ancestral lineage. Two games—a double header — resulting in a stronger bond of friendship, showing that blood is thicker than water.

Joseph Timothy Bryant, Jr., was in South Woodstock recently on a visit to see his father, Joseph Timothy Bryant, Sr., who is real poorly.

CHAPTER IX

IT WAS dark by the time Happy Jack called them to supper. Jim carried over an armload of brush to make a bright fire. By its flare Hays was seen approaching, and when he drew near he said: "Jim, did they tell you straight how I come to draw on Brad?"

"Reckon they did," replied Jim, coldly.

"Anythin' to say?"

"No. I don't see how you could have acted any differently."

"Wal, you've coppered it with the ace. The second Brad jumped me I seen in his eyes he meant to egg me on to draw. So I did it quick. . . . Jack, what you got fer supper?"

By tacit consent and without a single word the men avoided Happy Jack's table that night and ate around the camp fire. Hays stood up, Smoky sat on a stone. Jim knelt on one knee, and the others adopted characteristic poses reminiscent of the trail.

"Cool after the rain," remarked Hays, after he had finished. And he took up a blazing fagot of wood. "Reckon I'll make a little fire for my lady prisoner.

He stalked away, waving the fagot to keep it ablaze.

"I seen her last night when he called me to fetch her supper," said Jack. "Fust time I'd had a peek at her face lately. Seemed a ghost of thet other gurl."

"Yes, and you fellows saw only a ghost of the money Hays got from the Herricks," retorted Jim, divining the moment for revelation had come.

An angry roar arose. Smoky threw up his hands and left the camp fire. Then Jim, in brief, cold terms, exposed the machinations of their chief. After the first outburst they accepted the disclosure in astonished and ominous silence. Jim passed off into the darkness.

Some time during the night he was awakened. As he lay there, eyes open, a soft hand touched his cheek and a whisper brought him wide awake, transfixed and thrilling.

"Jim! . . . Wake up. It is I."

Helen knelt beside him. Jim sat up with a violent start.

"You! . . . What is it? Has that devil—"

"Hush! Not so loud. Nothing has happened. . . . But I couldn't sleep—and I must talk to you—or go out of my mind."

She bent lower, so that her face was closer, and she could whisper very softly:

"First I want to tell you how cruelly it has come home to me—my ignorance, my failure to believe and trust you, even after you—so—so rudely insulted me that day up on the mountain trail. If I had only had faith in you then! It's too late. But I want you to know I have the faith now. Only the fear and the suspense are wearing me out."

"But you are well—all right still? . . . He hasn't harmed you? Helen!"

"No, he has not harmed me, and I am not ill. I'm losing flesh because I can't eat. But that's nothing. . . . Lately I don't sleep because I'm horribly afraid he will come—and—smother me—or choke me—so I can't cry out. I've slept some in the daytime. . . . Jim, the thing is I—can't stand it much longer. Loneliness was paramount. There was no sound—only an immense silence. No life at all! Not a winged creature hovering over that ghastly region! But over this scene of desolation slowly spread the solemn blight of heating, blazing sun, soon to mantle all in illusive copper haze.

Before that hour arrived, Jim Wall took up the field glass. Below in the camp the men were lazily stirring to a late breakfast. The door of the cabin was open. A glint of gold crossed the dark aperture. Then the tall form of Hays stalked out. He yawned. He stretched wide his long arms. His ruddy face gleamed in the glass to that sight. Wall's whole being leaped.

"By heaven!" his voice rang out. "Hays, that's your last morning's stretch. . . . Before this day's done you'll stretch forever!"

Let his men have their hour, thought Jim darkly, but if they did not mete out justice to their chief the end was nevertheless fixed and unalterable.

Jim settled back and raised his fieldglass more from habit than any semblance of the old watchfulness. There was nothing to see but the stark denudation of the brakes.

He was so startled that the glass wavered out of line. He moved it to and fro, searching. What could that have been? An error of sight, a line of cedars, a conception of idle mind!

"There!" he breathed. He had caught it again. Not cedars—not brush, but moving objects! . . . "By heavens!" he muttered. "Am I dotty?"

Horses! A line of dark horses! His straining eyes blurred. He lowered the glass with shaking hands. "So help me—it looks like riders!"

A third time Jim caught the objects. He froze the glass on them. Horses and riders—horses with packs! A bursting gush of hot blood ran all through him. It looked like Heeseman's outfit, at least three miles away, approaching slowly by a route far to the south of that over which Hays had come.

"About three miles," muttered Jim. "Coming slow. They're lost. . . . But that wash they're in heads into the Hays trail. . . . If they strike that they'll come fast. Not enough rain yet to wash out our tracks. We've not time to pack and ride out. . . . By thunder, they've cornered us! Now, Hank Hays—"

Jim took one more straining look. No hope! It was a big outfit and not traveling so slowly, either. The leader bestrode a black horse. Jim remembered that horse. Snatching up his rifle he slung the field-glass over his shoulder and ran down off the bluff to the camp.

To his profound amaze he espied Hays bound hand and foot, with a stick behind him and through his elbows. The robber sat in an uncomfortable posture against the woodpile. In a second Jim saw that Hays had been gagged and his face was so contorted by rage that it appeared scarcely human.

Hays gave vent to an inarticulate sound, but it was expressive. Jim wheeled to stalk under the shack, his hand on his gun, as if he half expected Heeseman to have arrived before him. To his amaze Miss Herrick was sitting at the rude table eating breakfast. A big gun, that Jim recognized as Hays' property, lay conspicuously in front of her. Happy Jack, whistling as usual, was serving her.

"What does this mean?" demanded Jim.

"Ask the men," she replied, curtly.

"Who hawg-tied the boss?"

"Reckon I did—with a little help."

"What for?"

"D—n' if I know. Our lady prisoner made me do it."

"Miss Herrick forced you to tie Hays up?" queried Jim, trying to conceal his exultation.

"I should shiver she did. Struck Hays' hair-trigger gun—cocked—right into my belly, an' says: 'Will you tie this villain—an' swear by your honor not to release him or allow any of these other men to do so or will you have me shoot you?'"

"How'd she get that gun?"

"Wal, she snatched it quicker'n lightnin', that's how. An' when she cocked it with both hands it went off bang! The bullet went between Hank's legs. Tickled him. You can see the hole in his pants. Scared? My Gawd, you never see a man so scared. Thet gurl, cool as a cucumber, cocked the gun again, an' held Hays up—then all of us.

"We was sittin' at the table. She made us all stand, hands high, an' then she performed thet little trick with Hanks' gun agin my gizzard. Jim, I hope to die if I didn't go cold an' stiff. But I promised on my word of honor—as a robber—thet I'd tie Hank up, an' make the other fellers play square. It was so funny, too, thet I near bust. Hays, soon as he was helpless, got over his scare, an' then was he mad! I reckon no one on this earth saw a madder man. He cussed so terrible thet she made me gag him."

"No wonder. We was wuss. We'd had breakfast, an' Hank was tryin' to face us fellers. I'll say he came clean, Jim. He divided all the money he got from Herrick an' his sister, an' the gold things an' diamonds. 'Fellers,' he said, 'I could lie an' say I meant to give this to you later. But I'm not built thet way. I double-crossed you all—first time in my life. I meant to keep it all, an' the ransom fer the girl. But now there won't be no ransom, for I'm not goin' to give her up. She's mine, an' I can do as I want, an' if any of you don't like it you can make your kick now.' . . . Wal, we was so plumb flabbergasted thet we didn't see the gurl, who came close on the sun side of Happy's shelter. She heard the whole d—n' show. . . . Jim, I wish you could have seen her when she stepped up to Hank. I don't know what did it—mebbe her eyes—but he shore wilted. It was then she snatched his gun."

"So that's the deal!" ejaculated Jim. "What are you going to do?"

"Don't ask me. I gave my word an' I'll keep it. For that matter the rest of our outfit air fer the gurl, ransom or no ransom."

"Smoky, I know what you're all going to do, and that's fight," he flashed, curtly. "Heeseman's outfit is coming. I sighted them perhaps three miles. Traveling slow, but sure. We've no time to pack an' get away. We've got to find the best place to stand an' fight, an' pack our stuff into it pronto."

"Heeseman!" cried Smoky, coolly. "So it's come. I reckoned on thet. Git busy, men."

Jim strode under the shelter to face Miss Herrick. She had heard, for she was white.

"We're all but surprised by Heeseman's outfit. You will be worse off if you fall into their hands. I'm sorry I must release Hays. We need him."

"Too late!" she exclaimed.

"Pack your things quickly and hurry over to the cave on this side." Then Jim picked up Hays' gun from the table and ran out. First he removed the gag, then in terse terms he stated the situation. Next he released the robber from his painful fix and handed him the gun.

"Heeseman, huh! Wal, so be it!" Hays said. "How far are they away?"

"Two miles."

"We've got half an hour—mebbe. Did you think to look fer the hosses?"

"Fine scout you air. How come you didn't spy them soon enough fer us to rustle out of hyar?"

"I couldn't have seen them half a mile sooner," snapped Jim. "They came out from behind a bank."

"Hell's fire! Tell thet to me? You was sleepin'."

"You're a liar," flashed Jim, leaping clear of the others. "Open your trap to me again like that!"

"Say, it's you who'll shet his trap," replied Hays, stridently. "Or you'll git a dose of the medicine I gave Brad Lincoln."

"Not from you—you yellow dog of a woman thief!"

Smoky Slocum ran out in time to get in front of Jim.

"Hyar! Hyar!" he called, piercingly. "Is this a time fer us to fight each other? Cool down, Jim. Make allowances for Hays. He's wuss'n drunk."

"I don't care a d—n if there's ten outfits on our trail. He can't talk to me that way. . . . And, Smoky, I reckon you're presuming on friendship."

"Shore I am," returned Slocum, hurriedly. "I'll not do it again, Jim. Hays is what you called him. But leave your dispute till we settle with Heeseman."

"All right. You're talking sense," replied Jim. He had been quick to grasp the opening made by Hays. "There must be ten riders in Heeseman's outfit."

"Wal, thet suits me," rejoined the robber, harshly.

"Now think fast," snapped Smoky.

Hays pulled himself together. "Mac, you an' Jeff run to fetch what hosses you can find quick. . . . Jack, you an' Smoky an' Wall hustle the grub, cook kit, packs an' beds into thet cave across the wash. I'll git up high an' watch. When I yell, dig fer cover."

"You aimin' to fight or run?" queried Smoky.

"We might git packed light, if somethin' holds them up. But we can't leave the way we come in. Dirty Devil too high. Heeseman has stumbled on the next best way. If we had plenty of time. . . . But rustle, everybody."

Mac and Jeff were already in lumbering flight up the oval. And Happy Jack, not concerned enough to stop his whistling, was sacking his utensils. Hays made for the notch in the bluff west of the cabin. Jim sprang into action, while Smoky dashed off toward the cottonwood grove.

At the back of the cave there was a crack deep enough to protect Helen. He directed her to hide inside and await developments.

Jim ran on toward the camp, resolving to withhold a shell in his rifle and to keep a sharp watch on Hays.

The next quarter of an hour was filled with strenuous and unceasing action. Their united efforts collected all the supplies, utensils, saddles and packs, and several of the beds in the three-cornered cave back and to one side of the shack. A huge slab of stone lay across the top of this triangular notch in the cliff. The wall had been hollowed by the action of water. A small stream flowed out from the base of the wall.

It was the best place for defense in the oval, and Jim believed Hays' outfit could hold it indefinitely, though they couldn't save the horses. If it came to a siege they could be released.

The flames of the fire at South Waterford Monday evening were witnessed by nearly all in the neighborhood, it strikes awe to our hearts to see ones home destroyed in such times as these. We often wonder why there are so many fires but the question is sometimes answered as in the case near here last Wednesday evening. As a motorist was passing the Verrill camp he saw a fire under one corner of the building. Hurrying to a nearby house for assistance they returned and soon had the fire under control. They raked it over and found a mess of kindling piled under the camp and set on fire by some one intending to destroy the camp.

WEST PARIS 6 –BETHEL 3

Last Friday Bethel journeyed to West Paris where they met defeat 6-3. Bethel was forced to use a makeshift lineup and had bad breaks in general. Lucien Littlehale, catching, did the heavy hitting for Bethel along with "Win" Whitman, who poled out a long two-bagger and was robbed of a nice extra base hit by the umpire's decision. West Paris was out to win by one way or another and they did.

BETHEL TAKES CLOSE BATTLE FROM MC. FALLS

Last Thursday the locals journeyed to Mechanic Falls and Came back with a 2-1 victory. Bethel grabbed the two runs in the first inning off Bryant, rookie first-sacker, and about that time the grease monkeys decided to put in Gene Hebert. From then on the game was a pitchers' battle, both Hebert and Winnie Whitman pitching great ball, well supported by the men in back of them.

The game remained scoreless until the ninth inning when a three-bagger from Humphries brought Pratt in with only one gone and made things look bad for Bethel for a while. However, a fast double play, Whitman to Goddard to Scribner took care of that in short order. The sensational play of the game was a catch in the 8th by Ralph Young, Bethel shortstop, that was nothing less than miraculous.

The heavy hitter for Mechanic Falls was Humphries who grabbed a two bagger and a three bagger. Bethel is now even with the league leaders, Mechanic Falls and Bryant Pond, in games, having won two and lost two with each.

BETHEL 11 – SUMNER 6

Bethel got revenge last night by taking over Sumner 11-6 in six innings. This game was a free hitting game with Browne, Stanley, and Hood doing the heaving hitting for Bethel while Farrar and Redding were Sumner's big guns.

The Lesson-Sermon also includes passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, one of which reads: "Jesus established his church and maintained his mission on a spiritual foundation on Christ-healing.
